Graphic Design

I went to Antonelli College right after high school where I was in a small class for interactive media which gave me a taste of graphic design before I went to college. During my senior year, I was contacted by Antonelli College and went in to interview and receive my portfolio review. When I looked at other schools there work didn't appeal to me or have the level of professionalism that Antonelli offered.

Currently I have two comic books actually published. One of them is my own series, Ghost of Darkness, which I was working on while attending college. The other comic book I am working on with a partner and it is getting good reviews. We went to the comic expo and the producer of the "Dark Night" was there and saw our work and loved it.

Getting my education means the world to me. Without it, I would probably still be at home doodling on scraps of paper. Now I feel like the dreams I had when beginning Antonelli College are starting to come true.
